The predecessor of the University Library, the library of the Jesuit college of Nagyszombat, was founded in 1561 by Miklós Oláh, archbishop of Esztergom. It has become a university collection in 1635 when Péter Pázmány, the archbishop of Esztergom, founded the University of Nagyszombat. You may find further information on the history of the library here.

The collection

With its nearly 2 million documents the University Library has become the third largest library of the Hungarian capital. Until 1949 its collection interest covered works from all disciplines taught at the university, later it was limited to

- medieval and early modern world history,
- religion and history of religion.

Since then the library has a nation-wide responsibility for the collection of publications in these fields.

Furthermore the library collects and stores

- documents about the history of the university,

- outstanding pieces of Hungarian and world literature,
- all sorts of reference works, handbooks, dictionaries, scholarly works in Hungarian or in several foreign languages needed for research.

The old book collection of the library is a part of the National Cultural Heritage of Hungary, and is acknowledged all over Europe. The collection includes

- 185 codices (14 of them from the Bibliotheca Corviniana),
- 1,200 incunabula,
- 11,000 volumes from the 16th century
- 15,000 volumes from the baroque times (17th century) and 75,000 from the 18th century

There are several early Hungarian language relics, medieval charters, guilds' letters of patent, autograph manuscripts of outstanding persons, engravings, and maps in the manuscript and rarity collection.

More information about our collection is available here, further details regarding the collection can be found here. Collection

The University Archives has three functions:

- It collects and preserves the historic documents and museal objects of the Eötvös Loránd University as well as the legacy of late professors. Today there are about two thousand shelf running meters of records, including 30 legacies.
- The records are made available for historical research, and serve as bases of certification for private persons and official organizations (certification of studies).
- It conducts research on the history of the university, higher education, and the history of sciences, and publishes its findings in studies, monographs, source publications, and databases. So far approximately 60 volumes in four series have been published by the Archives.

There are many valuable records in the collection of the Archives such as the University's charter of foundation issued by Péter Pázmány in 1635, or the new deed of foundation by Maria Theresa from 1780 that has determined the organization and operation of the university for a long time; or the more than one hundred charters and codex fragments from before 1526, the battle of Mohács. The Archives also gathers museal objects, and images related to the history of the University.

Research service

It is possible to research the archival material in the research room of the Archives. Anybody may do research in the topic given in the submitted research application form, in which the regulations regarding research are also accepted, if access to the material intended for research is not limited. Information is provided on the methods of research in the Research Regulations in the research rooms, and by archivists serving researchers respectively. More information is available here.
